

The Reversed Pyramid of Power

This structure defines the role the school board should play in governance. John's view has always been the board only exists to support students first, followed by teachers, parents, support staff and then the administration. Parents, teachers and support staff form a unique bond which enhances the learning process. This is why no bond money was spent on the district office, but rather put directly back into the school sites.

